

Graduate Student Petitioners

Gaining Residency Status:

It is important to know that gaining residency status is not automatic. There is a petition process and students must meet State law requirements in order to be eligible.

There are many factors that go into determining residency eligibility. According to Colorado state law on Tuition Classification, being in Colorado solely for the purpose of an education does not qualify a student for residency status. Being in Colorado for 12 months also does not qualify a student for residency. The burden of proof is on the student to show clear and convincing evidence they are making Colorado their permanent home 12 months prior to the term they are petitioning for.

Residency matters because for graduate students on a graduate contract at Mines (RA, TA, certain fellowships), coverage of resident tuition is typically included. However, the higher costs of non-resident tuition will only be covered in your first year at Mines. You are expected to take the steps to establish residency at the start of your first year, so you can successfully petition for residency status before the start of your second year. If you do not petition, or if you are denied, you and/or your advisor are likely to become responsible for full costs of non-resident tuition after year one; these costs are approximately double the cost of resident tuition.

Below is more information on what is required to petition as a graduate student. If questions come up please contact residency@mines.edu.

Graduate students who are part of or are interested in the WICHE / WRGP (Western Regional Graduate Program) cannot petition for residency. Student's who are in a WICHE program and switch to a thesis based program or move to a PhD program will no longer receive the WICHE tuition rate. Rather, they will be assessed the non-resident rate. Once the non-resident rate takes effect is when students can begin establishing 12 months of domicile and intent in order to petition for residency status the following year.

Domicile & Intent

Colorado State law on Tuition Classification requires a minimum of 12 months of domicile and intent to be established before the the term you are petitioning for. This means you are expected to take action and establish domicile and intent at the beginning of your first year of graduate school in order to be eligible to petition for your second year.

DOMICILE is a person's permanent home. A person can only have one domicile. Evidence of domicile would be:

- Signed lease agreements
- Proof of home ownership (i.e. deed)
- Notarized statement from landlord including address and dates you lived there

INTENT is when a person severs ALL ties from their former state and establishes them in Colorado like any other resident of the state. According to Colorado state law on Tuition Classification, the following are evidence of intent (it is important you review the Graduate Petition Form to determine what documents you must submit):

- Colorado identification card or driver's license
- Vehicle registration in Colorado
- Voter registration in Colorado
- Colorado state tax return
- First two pages of your most recent federal income tax return
- Proof of employment in Colorado:
 - Either a letter from a current/former employer including dates of employment
 - Or acceptance of future permanent employment in the state of Colorado
 - Or W-2 forms

Filing taxes does not occur until the beginning of the year. This would not count towards the intent deadline. Proof of employment can also occur at any point in your 12 month period and is not counted towards the intent deadline.

Deadlines

Below are important dates and deadlines for the residency petition process.

Intent should be established as soon as a student arrives to the state, but we understand some services can take time.

Therefore, establishing intent should be done no later than the 'Intent Deadlines' listed. Students DO NOT submit anything by the 'Intent Deadline', it is intended to make students aware of when to establish intent by.

First semester of your program:	Intent Deadline: Students should establish intent as soon as they arrive to the state. This is the latest possible date to establish intent by to be eligible to petition the following year.
