Question, Persuade, Refer Training

Peer Educators

Student Health and Wellness

Coors Tek 282 and 370

QPR stands for Question, Persuade, and Refer —3 simple steps that anyone can learn to help save a life from suicide. Just as people trained in CPR help save thousands of lives each year, people trained in QPR learn how to recognize the warning signs of a suicide crisis and how to question, persuade, and refer someone to help.

Exploring Free Speech and Our Community Values

Sheena Martinez

Assistant Vice President of Student Life for Equity & Engagement

Metals Hall

During this session, we will delve into the tenants of free speech through the lens of current societal realities and the impact of those realities on our campus community. Framed through our community values, we will address tensions that exist for our campus community as we seek to actively foster an environment that embraces free speech while also promoting inclusivity and respect. Participants will be asked to engage in small and large group discussions during this session.

Smooth SAILing: Organizational Conflict Prep

Samantha Ralston

Assistant Director of Community Standards

Friedhoff 1

Conflict happens! This session will prepare members to manage conflict within their organizations by learning more about how to prevent conflict, how to manage conflict when it happens, how to engage with our own identities and lived experiences when conflict happens, and participants will learn more about resources on-campus that can support you along the way.

Keeping Each Other SAFE: Opioid Overdose Response Training

Dylan Dunn

Assistant Director of SAFE Campuses, Training and Professional Development

Bunker Auditorium

Each year, over 100,000 Americans die of an opioid overdose. With the right tools, every overdose is preventable and reversible. In this session, participants will learn about risk management and emergency response regarding opioid overdose and substance use. All attendees will leave with naloxone and tools for implementing education within their group/chapter.
